

CASUALTY LIST IS GROWING

REPORTS ARE COMING IN FROM RECENT BATTLE IN DAILY LISTS.

Washington, Aug. 1.—It can be stated upon official authority that American casualties during the last two weeks have been heavy. But while they have been extremely heavy in comparison to the number of men lost by the fighting forces previous to the Crown Prince's drive on the Marne, they have not been, in the opinion of those officials who are in a position to know, in excess of what might have been expected from the nature of the fighting that has been in progress.

Officials of the War Department know from the reports of Gen. Pershing that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Americans have been killed, wounded or captured since July 15, but they are aware, moreover, that the losses have not been as staggering as German reports have indicated, nor the loss of life among the Americans approximately as great have led this country to believe.

It may be some time before the actual losses sustained by the Americans in this battle can be totaled. There is no doubt that it will require at least two weeks after the fighting has ceased before Gen. Pershing will be enabled to report definitely to Washington upon the matter of totals but he will not hold back the names of those soldiers who have fallen in the earlier stages of the engagement any longer than is necessary to establish their identity.

The casualties, in other words will come along from day to day just as they did before. Gen. Pershing has been given orders to forward the names of the men killed, wounded or missing the first moment that this information is available and authentic. As a result of this order there will be no sudden shocks in this country when the casualties are counted. They will not be held back for a fixed period of time and then published all at once.

Instead of this the names will be cabled from the American headquarters in a steady stream and day by day the list of names will grow longer until the peak has been reached and the fighting has ended.

While in its casualty lists the War Department gives out no information regarding the circumstances of a soldier's death or injury or regarding the battle in which he participated, it can be stated positively that the casualties from the great offensive and counter offensive now in progress are even now being made public.

Further, they have been coming in for more than three days. The lists have not been materially longer than in recent weeks, but they are growing and will continue to grow until the fighting is over.

METHODS OF BARBARIANS

A RACE WITHOUT HONOR OR REGARD FOR HUMANE DECENCIES.

Correspondents are producing undoubted evidence that German Red Cross workers are often soldiers in disguise. One report says:

Wounded American medical corps men were bombed by these supposed noncombatants while engaged in bringing succor to the wounded. The German stretcher bearers emerged from their own lines ostensibly on the same humane mission. Some Americans were slightly wounded, but their seemingly adversaries were slain to a man by fire from one of our machine guns hidden near by.

From five eyewitnesses I learned of another instance of the enemy's cynical disregard for elemental decencies in warfare. North of Mont Somme Pere, on the Marne, a German machine gun gave our advanced troops a good deal of trouble. A platoon was ordered to surround the emplacement and capture the gunners. When the Americans crept up near the spot they saw two Germans with Red Cross insignia staggering along with stretchers. Our men held their fire, but succeeded in capturing the Germans without a struggle. On the stretcher, wrapped up in blankets to give it semblance of a human form, was a machine gun.

The Americans, all of whom were sent back from the front line and had themselves seen or heard from comrades of German medical orderlies' behavior, eyed the Germans with cold ferocity.

"They ain't a human race," one of them muttered.

Most of these privates' talk hinged on the enemy's foul play. Infernal traps set by the enemy in places he had been driven out of enraged their fairness even in war. They told me how an innocent-looking pile of grenades had been linked up with electric batteries in such a way that the whole heap would explode if one were touched. An American engineer discovered the secret wiring before any harm was done.

Cruel devices of this kind seldom succeed, because of the caution with which our soldiers, warned by poison, approach German relics, but they infuriate the youngsters, to whom this sort of fighting is abhorrent.

"Man that would fix up a thing like that oughtn't to live," a hollow-eyed young Pennsylvanian, who had been on the firing line 48 hours without food or water, remarked at the hand-grenade trap, and everybody agreed with him.

One of the others chimed in with an experience he had had the day before.

"I seen a big boche lying groaning in a shell hole, with his face covered with blood," he said. "He begged to be taken prisoner, as near as I could make out, and wanted some water."

"I wasn't wastin' time on him, once I was sure he was wounded, but when I'd got on past him I turned and looked back just for luck and there was the blankety blank pointing his rifle at me. I had my revolver in my hand and fired awful quick. Then I took a good look at the blankety blank. Outside my bullet there wasn't a thing the matter with him. Blood on his face came from a little cut on his hand he had made with a knife, probably when he heard me comin'. He had smeared blood over his dirty map just for camouflage. What'd you thing of that?"

MUST BE EXTERMINATED.

Bishop McCormick (Episcopal) just back from France, where he was in charge of Red Cross chaplains, told the Rotary Club the German duty now is to kill Germans. There can be no peace except that won by a military decision, he insisted. He also told of being in a French town where 14 out of 15 Red Cross hospitals were deliberately bombed. Next day he personally conducted 28 funerals of Americans killed in this raid.

WAR GARDENERS RESPOND TO CALL

"Keep the Food Coming" as General Pershing Has Asked.

BIG INCREASE THIS YEAR

Central West and Pacific Coast especially are doing well. Commission Officers Prize for Best Home-Grown Canned Vegetables.

Washington.—The war gardeners of the United States and territories are called to "Keep the Food Coming." There are, according to figures being tabulated by the national war garden commission, 4,000,000 war gardeners in the United States. These figures are incomplete and the estimates were made on reports received up to June 15. This number indicates an increase of 40 per cent over last year when there were 2,500,000 gardeners making plants at work. Figures in the increased cost this year over last, further estimates will be made by the commission both on the number of gardens and the estimated crop value.

"Taking these early figures into consideration," said Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the commission, in making public the preliminary survey, "together with the increased canning demonstration work being done by the United States department of agriculture in cities and towns, we feel safe in saying the forecast of 1,500,000,000 quarts in tin and glass of canned stuff, made by the department, will be reached."

Big Prizes Are Offered.

The report points to the early planting season this year, which was made possible by weather generally favorable throughout the country. To encourage saving the garden crop the national war garden commission, which planted a 400-acre demonstration war garden at Camp Dix, N. J., is offering $10,000 in prizes for the best canned vegetables grown in war gardens, with the slogan "Back up the cannon by use of the canner."

In nearly every section of the country there has been an appreciable and encouraging increase in the number of war gardens this year, the commission announced. This has ranged anywhere from 10 to 60 per cent. In the Eastern portions there was a failure to note a gain on the early returns.

"The greatest percentage of increase," the commission's statement adds, "was made in the Central Western states and Pacific coast, taking any one section of the country as a whole. There an awakening has taken place which revealed itself in an enthusiastic, widespread drive to help home food production. Of the total number of war gardens in the United States, the preliminary reports show that more than 2,000,000 of them—2,270,000, to be exact—were in the Central Western territory. There was a gain of fully 50 per cent over the war garden activity of last year."

Eastern States Lagging.

"The Eastern states, including New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, on the whole showed little increase over last year. In certain parts of all this territory there has been a better showing, and particularly has there been a greater activity among manufacturing concerns in providing food for their employees; but these gains have been counteracted to a certain extent by less activity in other places."

"The amount of food home-grown along the upper Atlantic coast this year will be slightly if any greater than last year. Better cultivation in hundreds of cases may make up for what is lacking in numbers. In New York the park department alone reports 2,000 war gardens 25 by 40. The total number of war gardens in this territory, as shown by the returns to the national war garden commission, is 2,000,000."

"The South has made an excellent record, certain states in particular having made notable gains. Including Texas and Oklahoma, there are a total of 2,000,000 war gardens in the South. The total number of war gardens in the entire United States, California, Washington and Oregon show a total of 2,000,000 war gardens."

"The number of war gardens in the United States, as shown by the returns to the national war garden commission, is 2,000,000."

There are 21,262,000 dairy cows in the United States.
